

For Immediate Release
April 24, 2023

For ASL, click on link

Here we grow again! We're making WAVES this May!

Vancouver, BC –On May 1, 2023, the Willow Street Office of the Wavefront Centre for Communication Accessibility will relocate to a brand-new neighborhood after months of planning and extensive construction, providing a space that is more contemporary and accessible.

“We chose May 1 to open our new Kitsilano Office as May is Better Hearing and Speech Month,” says, Christopher T. Sutton, CEO of Wavefront Centre.

Sutton added, we have outgrown our current office space on Willow Street and needed to meet the increasing demand for hearing health care and other services. “We are the go-to destination for all things related to accessible communication,” Sutton said.

Hugh McCormack, Director of Clinical Operations + Business Development at Wavefront Centre, commented that our client base is expanding, and the significance of hearing care is growing among consumers. There is a greater understanding and appreciation of the need to focus on one’s hearing health,” he said.

Quick Facts:

- Wavefront Centre is a not-for-profit organization, operating as a social enterprise. All of its revenues from its revenue generating programs, goes back into supporting its mission in breaking down communication barrier for people who are Deaf, DeafBlind and Hard of Hearing.
- Wavefront Centre offers a variety of programs and services, including: Audiology and Communication Devices, Community Outreach, Community Research, and Accessible Communication Services.
- Wavefront Centre designed and operates the most accessible building in Canada at 2005 Quebec Street, which is known as its Central Hub.

The grand opening launching the Kitsilano Office is scheduled for Thursday, May 11, and will feature a ribbon-cutting ceremony at 2 p.m., as well as special promotions, prizes, snacks and refreshments.

-30-

Media Contact:
Gordana Mosher gordana.mosher@wavefrontcentre.ca
Mobile 905-572-3923